

Nominating beneficiaries

FIRST

This fact sheet explains what happens to your super payout, and your insurance payout, when you die. We know it's not nice to think about, but it's important to make sure you have signed the right paperwork telling us your wishes. We're here to help you with that.

You might assume that when you die, your super will become part of your Will or estate and be distributed with your other belongings and money.

But super doesn't work like this.

First Super must follow strict super and tax laws to decide who will get your super and insurance payments (known as your 'death benefit'). This includes considering your wishes for who your money is paid to when you die. The person you want to receive your super is called a 'beneficiary'. You can have more than one.

There are four types of beneficiaries you can nominate.

In a nutshell, there are four types of 'beneficiaries' you can nominate to receive your super and insurance payments if you die. You can select one or more from the options below and assign a percentage of the payment you want them to receive using our Nomination of Beneficiary Form.

Spouse/Partner

Includes married and de facto (same or different sex) relationships.

Children

Your children of any age (including step, adopted, ex-nuptial or children of your spouse).

Interdependent

Someone who lives with you on a long-term or permanent basis, where one or both of you provide financial and domestic support, and personal care of the other.

Financial Dependant

Someone who relies on you (totally or partially) for financial assistance or support. For example, you pay the bills, rent, etc.

What if I want my super to go to someone else?

You may want your super to go to someone who cannot be nominated as a beneficiary, such as a sibling, friend or parent who is not dependent on you.

If that is the case, don't worry. While super doesn't automatically become part of your estate, you can nominate a Legal Personal Representative to receive your death benefit and distribute it.

This is the executor of your Will, or the person responsible for administering your estate if you do not have a Will. This gives you more options for who gets your super.

Your options for beneficiary nominations

Nomination type	Non-Binding	Lapsing Binding	Non-Lapsing Binding	Reversionary (TTR and Retirement Income accounts only)
What it means	This is a request only. Ultimately, the Trustee (First Super) decides who gets your super.	A legally binding request we must follow if you die (provided it is valid).	The same as a binding nomination, with one important difference.	The nominated person will receive your ongoing retirement income payments when you die.

Tax rules

When your beneficiaries receive your super death benefit, different tax rules will apply and this will depend on their relationship to you. More information is available on the ATO website, visit ato.gov.au.

Let's talk

We can confirm your current nominated beneficiary details (if any) and discuss the best way to update or change these to suit your wishes. For help with this process or the form, please call our Member Services Team on 1300 360 988, or email us at mail@firstsuper.com.au.

Check your nomination is valid

Choosing a beneficiary for your super is important, but it can be easy to make a mistake if you're not 100% sure who is eligible to be nominated. If you're unsure, get in touch with us for help. This way, you can be confident your nomination is valid, meaning your wishes must be taken into account by us.

Once you've made your nomination, it's a good idea to check it occasionally, in case your circumstances change. Some common scenarios where your beneficiary nomination may need to be reviewed and changed include:

- if you separate from your partner
- if you remarry
- the birth or death of a child
- if there are changes to those who are financially dependent on you
- if there are changes to people with whom you have an interdependent relationship, for example you start caring for someone with a physical or intellectual disability
